Abortion debated, suffering understood

This is going to be a slanted news story.

The St. James Literary Society last night hosted a panel discussion on "Abortion: For or Against" before a lively, but disappointingly inelegant audience, in the carpeted, velvet-draped and heavily chandeliered Versailles Salon of the Windsor Hotel.

Cerise Morris, Director of the Women's Centre at the Y.W.C.A., opened the discussion by calling for the right of women to control their own bodies. She discussed the results of restricted access to abortion: the death and mutilation of women due to attempted self-abortion or quack doctors.

The second speaker was Ursula Lafontaine, introduced as "Chairman" of the Montreal Pro-Life Group. Lafontaine claimed that any talk of women's rights was mere rationalization of the real issue, the destruction of human life. She called the fetus a human being, with a minute description of its intrauterine development, up until halfway through the gestation period when the eyebrows and eyelashes sprout. In discussing the various methods of abortion that desperate and panicky women resort to, she went into a heart-rending account of babies "being torn to pieces." Abortion is nothing more than "sophisticated barbarism", and those who encourage its availability engage in "schizophrenic subterfuge" (did I spell that correctly?) according to Lafontaine. In addition, by allow-

New Brunswick Notoriety

Richard Wilbur, described as "Canada's only free-lance historian", yesterday delivered a lecture entitled "Three studies of New Brunswick society".

A native of New Brunswick, Wilbur is concerned with recording the history of this small and quite isolated province, a history which has been neglected since the 1870's.

Wilbur stated that New Brunswick was different from other provinces because, among other things, "it has produced men with larger than life personalities". In accordance with this view, his approach to the study of New Brunswick society is indirect, focusing on the lives of three of its most famous men: Sir George Parkin, R.D. Bennett, and Louis Robichaud.

The lives of these men covers an eighty year period, but all three came from small rural communities in Southern New Brunswick, were educated at the primary and secondary levels within the province, gained recognition beyond New Brunswick borders, and "all suffered from rejection or oblivion at home".

Sir George Parkin, active from the 1870's to the early twentieth century, exemplified the British imperialist sentiment and Canadian nationalism; sentiments which Wilbur believes are still held by the English New Brunswick inhabitants today.

Having been educated in a system which followed and reinforced the British tradition, Parkin later went on to study at Oxford University and was Secretary of the Oxford Debating Union in 1873. To Parkin, "his year in England was the decisive year of his life", and believing in the worth of education in general and in the English system in particular, he attempted to develop strong institutions in New Brunswick which would produce a "core of leaders".

He did not meet with much success due to the "the pragmatic outlook toward education in New Brunswick"; people were not willing to spend money on such a venture.

As principal of Upper Canada College, Parkin managed to administer education as he saw fit and was highly respected in his field. "He was the only man who could face a group of rambunctious students and convince them not to steal apples from the apple orchards—and they didn't."

R.D. Bennett is famous as a businessman and politician, though he "used teaching as a stepping-stone to fame and fortune". Both he and Parkin shared the qualities of "frankness, sobriety, self-confidence, and a political orientation". The particular aspect of New Brunswick character he typifies, however, is that of clannishness. Wilbur tells us that "Bennett was successful because of personal acquaintances", and as a brilliant lawyer and businessman he was able to take full

CEGEPS vote on strike

Students at Dawson and John Abbott CEGEP have voted overwhelmingly to stage a one-day strike between now and December 1. Dawson students voted 90% in favor of strike action, while 70% of John Abbott students voted for the action. Vanier College will make the results of their vote known Thursday at noon; the French CEGEP will announce their results Friday.

These developments result from numerous study sessions held yesterday and Monday, with the full approval and participation, in most cases, of faculty members as well as stu-

The strikes have been called by the Front des Etudiants du Quebec to protest the Nouveau Régime Pédagogique, which was announced by the Ministry of Education several weeks ago. The document outlining the Régime aims at establishing, among other things, longer hours for humanities students, as well as required science and phys. ed. credits. Two CEGEPs, St. Hyacinthe, and Alma, (in Lac St. Jean), have already been on strike for some time over the issues. In both cases, students are in control of the administration offices, bringing the operation of the CEGEPs to a halt.

The Minister of Education, François Cloutier, has sent a telegram to the Directors-General of all CEGEPs asking them to attend a meeting to be held today. The minister intends to "clarify" what he termed "misunderstandings and abusive interpretations" on the part of both students and faculties.

The FEQ, meanwhile, will hold a regional conference in Montreal this weekend to determine a date for the strike, and to discuss a petition on the Nouveau Régime which is to be circulated shortly.

ing the slaughter of the innocents we are opening the way for a society in which none of us is safe. Next it will be old people and crippled children. "Seek not for whom the bell tolls, it tolls for thee," was the note upon which she ended.

Dr. Henry Morgenthau, the next panelist, is the well-known abortion crusader who is presently being tried for allegedly assisting in the procurement of an abortion. He started off by stating that he is "against abortion, but for the right of women to decide for themselves." He insisted that women must be able to terminate unwanted pregnancies safely, legally and securely. He calls the illegal status of abortion in Canada today the imposition of the "misguided moral code of Catholic doctrine." This statement was met with boos from the audience. Morgenthau agreed that Catholics have the right to attempt to convince others of their viewpoint, but that they have no right to enforce this view in the laws of the state. He asked "Where does freedom of religion and conscience come in?"

The final speaker was Father Peter Morris, a member of the St. James Literary Society and a Catholic priest. (Incidentally, he sounded just like Jack in the "Fourth Tower of Inverness".) He traced the moral degeneration of society from abortion to euthanasia, to a "brave new world, where nobody's life is without peril."

Answering the argument of pro-abortion forces, Father Morris said that justifying the legalization of abortion in order to save the lives of women who die from butcher abortions is tantamount to saying that the government should start distributing pure LSD and heroin to save the lives of addicts who die from poisoned drugs they buy on the street.

Father Morris claims that making abortion easily accessible is part of the "instant coffee, instant happiness" mentality. "There is a great mystery to life, a mystery to suffering. I wish I had the time to go into the psychology and sociology of suffering..." Father Morris understands suffering. Priests are voluntarily celibate in order to better identify with misery, according to him.

All in all, it was an interesting encounter between the forces of light and the forces of darkness.

Schifran speaks on Soviet repression

"These are very bad days in Russia and in your hands are these people. All that you do here, they know and it makes them brave. You must make demonstrations."

Thus spoke Avraam Shifran, Jewish writer from the Soviet Union, who spent ten years in Soviet concentration camps. Shifran is on a world wide speaking tour to publicize massive demonstrations to be held December 10, in support of Soviet political prisoners.

In the late forties many Jews wanted to study Jewish literature and history. "Nothing criminal," he said, "yet we all went to prison. It was impossible to even think about something non-Communist and not be in a concentration camp."

Shifran stressed the omnipresence of KGB agents. No one knew whom he could trust. People were carted off to concentration camps for very minor offences. Shifran met a man when they were in the same camp who was sentenced to 25 years for "terrorism" because he related a dream he had in which Stalin was killed.

Between three and four years ago, the Soviet government was in the throes of an internal power struggle, and so was unable to crack down on dissidents, he said.

Now the Soviet hierarchy has consolidated its position. Because of Nixon's cordial attitude toward the Soviet leaders, Shifran claims that they are able to suppress the agitation. Shifran told of letters he has received from the Soviet Union condemning Nixon for being so friendly to the Soviet leaders.

The KGB, he said, has cracked down on the dissidents and thousands have been arrested and sent to concentration camps.

Yet there is some hope, Shifran told the audience. "The Soviet government is afraid of our friendship. Jews, Ukrainians, Russians, Tartars must together demonstrate against the repression."

The Soviet Union, he said, has cracked down on the dissidents and thousands have been arrested and shipped to concentration camps. Political activists are being falsely accused of hooliganism or thievery and are summarily sent to prison.

On December 10, massive demonstrations will be held around the world demanding that the Soviet government free all political prisoners in concentration camps.

"We must demonstrate, Shifran stated, "because our silence helps the killers."

"We must demonstrate together, because only then will the Soviet government listen."

Regina Administration rejects parity

REGINA (CUP)—John Archer, Principal of the University of Saskatchewan, Regina Campus, has announced that the University Administration will not support students in their struggle to obtain parity on department committees.

At a press conference held November 20, Archer said the University's Board of Governors had decided that only department chairmen have the right to change the composition of committees.

Archer would not comment on what steps the University would take to end the occupation of the Dean of Arts and Science and the Dean of Graduate Studies offices. He did say, however, that in his opinion the occupation did not seriously interfere with the functions of the University.

"I believe that students have the right to be involved in decisions relating to their academic careers and welfare. But I do not think that students pay their fees and come to Regina Campus in order to be given the task of running the University. They come to acquire knowledge and to learn the methods and techniques whereby they may continue to learn", said Archer. Students occupied the offices after Arts and Science Dean Sir Edgar Vaughan vetoed a motion passed by the Social Science Division making parity compulsory in the Division. Six out of eight departments in the Division already have parity.

Archer denied any knowledge as to why the University Bookstore, Registrar's office, Bursar's office, Cafeteria, and his own office were closed November 20.

A memo circulated amongst the Registrar's staff claimed the University could no longer guarantee their safety due to the student occupation.

Students will hold a general meeting November 22 to decide what their next step will be. There is fear amongst the students that the Administration will stall until December 6, when Christmas exams begin.

Regina Students' Union President, Don Anderson, said at Archer's press conference that he will support a move to close down the entire University. Students thus far have refrained from interfering with the academic functions of the University. The annual convention of the Saskatchewan New Democratic Party (NDP) held in Saskatoon November 16-19 passed a motion calling for the autonomy of each campus (Regina and Saskatoon) and equal representation of students, faculty, and the community on all levels of the University's governing committees.

The occupying students have received messages of support from the Saskatchewan Waffle, Memorial University Student Union, Saskatoon Campus Student Union, the Regina Allied Printing Trades Council, and the National Farmers Union.

The Allied Printing Trades declared in their press release that, "The University must be made to serve the needs of the people of Saskatchewan, and until real control of the University lies in the hands of students, the community, and faculty, this will not be possible."

advantage of his contacts. As a young lawyer Bennett was able to get a position in a firm headed by a fellow New Brunswicker.

His later achievements also were possible because of co-operation from what Wilbur refers to as a "Maritime Mafia". In passing, but also in particular reference to Bennett, Wilbur noted "the Canadian penchant for Prime-Ministers who don't marry or who marry late, and who are markedly attracted to their mothers."

In discussing Louis Robichaud, lawyer and politician, Wilbur spoke of the Acadian natives of New Brunswick and described the province as consisting of "two distinct communities which meet only in the market-place, which is English-controlled."

Born an Acadian, Robichaud had to learn English and attend an English high school since the educational system did not provide French-speaking schools. While attending the Sacred Heart College in Bathurst, Robichaud became involved in politics, leading a militant group who demanded that French courses be part of the curriculum.

After establishing a law practice, he was elected to the legislature, though he "Never said a word in four years, but made up for it later". He was elected Premier of New Brunswick, serving from 1963-1968, a period marked by Acadian and Québécois unrest. As premier he tried to interest the Federal government in New Brunswick affairs, and to improve the living standard and education of the poorer French community. The English, however, were resistant to a tax structure less favourable to themselves.

Wilbur sympathised with the French politically but said "the French people (of New Brunswick) have a great many assurances of keeping their language, but they have already lost their culture."

The Pot question: indignancy from all sides

He who pays the piper...

Sir,
I have noticed that there was a petition circulating on campus calling for the resignation of the Plumber's Pot editors and for them to appear and justify their actions before McGill students. Since, to the best of my knowledge, the Pot is paid for and published for McGill engineers, the paper is responsible only to the engineers and not the campus at large.

While the Pot is for the most part garbage (like most papers on campus) most of the objectors didn't pay for it and don't have to read it. It is also funny, that suddenly after three years, of such issues the paper is suddenly branded racist and sexist. Have they just learned to read?

Stefan Czereyski
B. Eng. 5

Pot is rot, but let it be

Sir,

We are concerned about recent events on campus related to the publication of the latest issue of the Plumber's Pot. We feel that it is our obligation as individuals and engineers to make a statement.

We strongly object that material containing, in our opinion, libelous attacks on individuals and groups has been allowed to appear in our newspaper.

We understand and share the anger and many frustrations experienced by our fellow engineers in the seemingly ineffective mass of bureaucracy in which the Students' Society operates. We agree with the many criticisms voiced by EUS executives against the present structure of the Students' Society and fully endorse any efforts to change it. We do not believe, however, that our alienation justifies attacks on individuals and groups.

In accordance with our sentiments, we made a motion at the EUS Council meeting on November 15 condemning the libelous material and calling for the resignation of the person or persons responsible for that issue of the Pot. The EUS Council did not feel that the people responsible should resign, and an amended motion was passed, as published in the November 16 issue of the Daily.

Deeply disappointed by the insufficient measures adopted by the EUS Council, we made plans for an Open Meeting of the EUS.

We desired an Open Meeting for two main reasons. As engineers, we wanted to affirm our right to administer our own internal affairs. We did not want non-engineers and the Administration to intervene in this incident.

In addition, we wished to involve more engineering students than just those on the EUS Council in the affairs of our faculty.

At the proposed Open Meeting, we wanted to sponsor a motion calling for the resignation of the editors. In our opinion, the public apology offered was insufficient in that the editors had not fully accepted their responsibilities nor retracted their statements.

However, we came to the realization that a great number of engineers were reacting emotionally and defensively and were interpreting all criticism of the Pot as being an attack upon their faculty.

One instance of such a defensive reaction was the removal at distribution points of the November 16 Daily which contained material critical of the Pot.

In addition, our efforts to call an Open Meeting became confused with the attempts of a campus-wide committee established to combat sexism and racism.

As a result, we called an informal meeting with the Pot editorial staff and the EUS executives. We were informed that the entire staff of the Pot has assumed responsibility for the latest issue of the newspaper. Consequently, pressing for our demands on grounds of morality would mean, in effect, calling for the destruction of the Pot.

The Pot editorial staff assured us that it is making efforts to meet the persons involved and that a complete retraction will be forthcoming. They also expressed their intention to hold a meeting at a later and more appropriate date to discuss the relevance of the Pot to engineers.

Since it is by no means our intention to destroy the Pot, we agreed not to press for staff resignations and consequently can-

Praise for the Pot

Sir,

I am writing in regard to the controversy over last Wednesday's issue of the Plumber's Pot. I am an engineering student. I have been reading the Pot for the last year and some months and enjoying it. I do not consider myself to be a sexist.

With this introduction I would just like to comment on why I am opposed to any action being taken in regard to the last issue of the Pot. As any engineering student will tell you, we probably work the hardest of any group of undergraduates at this university. Anyone who disagrees with this statement obviously is not in engineering. We must also suffer the lack of members of the fairer sex in our classes, for we live in a building apart from the rest of the mainstream of the campus and there are, unfortunately, very few women in engineering. To help relieve the tensions of our work load we engage in riotous sporting activities and consume vast quantities of beer, etc. We also publish a newspaper which is also filled with reports of our riotous sporting activities, reports of our latest consumption of vast quantities of beer, etc, and our fantasies of (at times) getting even with the profs who pile on our heavy work loads. We also celled the proposed Open Meeting.

We believe we have done everything possible to present a proper perspective of the events. It is now up to the EUS and other individual engineers to take whatever steps they deem necessary. Though we have the option to publish such material as we see fit in our paper, we should not and cannot be insular and oblivious to the feelings of the McGill community at large.

Attacking the broad underlying base

Sir,

We feel that the letter to the Daily, (November 20), by Comas, Wolf et al. should not go without comment. It should be noted that this is a general observation, not a personal attack.

That particular letter explicitly exposes the calibre of persons whom we'll call, "dormant sexists": a group of people similar in nature to the "silent majority" backing Nixon. They don't like to be labelled or pointed out, (e.g. as sexists), they are seldom heard from; but they, often without make excessive jokes (which some find, and which often are, vulgar) about the opposite sex, about our endeavors, or about our fantasies. But it is a joke, as is much of the publication known as the Plumber's Pot. It relieves the boredom and frustration. Many people wait every third Wednesday morning for the Pot to reach the stands. We don't want to see the Pot change because of outside pressures. The Pot isn't sexist as an insult (if indeed you must call it sexist at all) but as an outlet. Nor is this year's Pot any worse than those of the past; in fact I think it is much tamer, and I have the back issues to prove it.

I therefore feel that those people who are condemning the Pot are overreacting. This episode has all been great. Everyone has gotten a lot of mileage out of it over the last few days (especially the Daily). It's the first time all year that I've read two consecutive issues from cover to cover. I read all of every issue of the Pot of course) but it's about time to bring the issue to a close. Why not attack publications like Playboy or Penthouse for sexism. They do the same thing we do, only more blatantly.

Of course I agree that Mr. Frank Costi, other McGill workers, and Mr. Hoffman and Miss Hardy deserve apologies and that any such cartoons that are going to recognizing it or acknowledging it, are the broad underlying base supporting an evil which must be overcome. Through ignorance people stand in the way of progress.

The ingrained attitudes of the individuals who wrote the letter towards homosexuals and females are the ones we refer to. The statement, "If homosexuals are not perverted, who is?" hardly deserves a comment—it comments for itself. Another exposure of the true nature of the authors appears when we read, "It is widely recognized that a beautiful female body is an aesthetic object, thus it often appears on the pages of today's.... press." It is widely recognized by whom, we ask. By all the screwed up people who think that because the bour-

Prayers for the Pot

Sir,

The Pot issue raises many important questions about the political and journalistic arena that McGill is today. In my three years at McGill the Pot has always been a principle source of reading pleasure, unlike the Daily which has always been a prime source of indigestion and nausea. I will grant that in the last issue, certain boundaries of good taste were broken, e.g., "Fuck the Metro, grab a bust." and Dr. John's "column", however, I cannot stomach the suggestions made in the Daily staff statement of deal with members of the McGill community this openly should be okayed by those in question in advance. But I know of no other publication that does this and I think I can assume that the "attack" was so blatant that most, if not all readers, could clearly see that this was done for its satirical (sic) content and nothing more. I am anxiously awaiting the next episode.

As to the other two points which the committee took offense to, plenty of worse things have been said about the Students' Society, although maybe not in print. Still, they are in a position in which they must expect to be openly condemned even to the point of being called "fucking disgusting shitheads".

As far as the gays go, they have come under attack as "perverts" before and I'm sure that this won't be the last time either, and I'm speaking now of major publications, not just the Pot.

In closing, I'd just like to point out that by forcing a change in the Pot you would be disallowing the freedom of the press. Plenty of people like the Pot the way it is. No one forces you to read the Pot. If you don't like what it says, don't read it. But I enjoy reading it, all of it, and I want it to stay just the way it is.

Dave Cohn,

geois press exploits the female, it must be right? One cringes at the implications. And what do these people say of the female body which isn't "beautiful"? Who is interested in the female herself—not these people, we assume.

These "aware" people try to tell us that what we find in the Pot, represents "the 'basic' realities of life", and that if we object to the misuse of the female form in the Pot, we are perhaps homosexuals. The mind boggles.

We won't attempt to cover everything in the letter, the rest of which consists of attempts and failures to convert minor technical points into arguments. We hope our point has been made.

Robert Hulfman (Eng 3)

November 16. In your usual omnipotent wisdom you saw fit to condemn the Pot and call for the resignation of the editors. Meanwhile you, the intellectual staff (and I use that term very loosely), insult our intelligence every morning with a substance that can only be called horseshit.

I took offense at some of the comments in the Pot, however, I cannot condemn them for being the only source of political satire and criticism of our putrid "Students' Society" and its policies. A typically inane decision was the granting of funds to the Gay Society for the maintenance of an off-campus office and, of all things, a 24-hour 'hot-line'.

I can only pray that Mr. Kajaks and the Pot staff will modify their policies slightly and continue in their much appreciated role as the only objectors to the abominations commonly known as the Daily and the 'Student's' Society.

Adler's appeal

Sir,

Once again the pseudo-radicals of McGill are attempting to stampede students into supporting "their" cause through intimidation and other tactics characteristic of the "Degenerate Left".

The "New Purists" who would have you close down the Plumber's Pot would also have you close down the Montreal Star or the Gazette for the publishers of these papers also indulge in what Leftist Radicals would consider to be anti-people activities; the difference being that the manner of the Star and Gazette is more covert than that of the Pot. These same radicals would have you believe that "All in the Family" is a television show which is in poor taste for it serves only to vindicate the racists and sexists making the two evils acceptable in our society.

I think that most of you on this campus want an open society; not a closed one. In an Open Society nothing is immune to criticism or even ridicule. An Open Society can have no sacred cows. Unfortunately, the "Purists" do not advocate an Open Society but I don't think that this is what most students want.

So I ask you not to censure the Pot, not unless you are prepared to go on censoring what any publication on this campus prints or what any administrator or faculty member says. For if you look long and hard enough you'll be able to uncover racism, sexism, and all the other cruelisms everywhere... And if you want to play the censorship game you'll surely be choking the spirit of the Open Society in general and this university in particular.

Alex Adler

Kill sensationalism; save wolves

Sir,

I am amazed by the huge reaction of the McGill community to the last issue of the Plumber's Pot.

I don't agree with the opinions expressed in the Pot, but I think this whole affair shows something of the priorities of McGill students.

While so many of you were running around signing petitions against the Pot, did any of you realize that in the Redpath Library there is a petition against the Quebec wolf hunt which is sadly in need of signatures?

Ah, but does that old McGill apathy creep back into you when the sensationalism dies off and something really important comes up?

Hugh Collins E2

Look up, look way up

Sirs,

On the subject of slander and libel against the Pot, please let me quote George Kopp: "... obnoxious, half-wit creeps like Kajaks." Look up, way up; out of your hole.

Redmen Cagers fall to Hatchet

by John M. Robertson

The Universe is not these days unfolding as it should. Not when one considers the most recent loss of the Redmen cagers last night at Currie Gymnasium. That 74-58 loss at the hands of the Ottawa Gee-Gee's coupled with a duo of defeats over the weekend seems at first glance to spell out an inability on the part of the McGill cagers to win.

Three losses in as many games does not, however, mean the beginning of the end. To understand what transpired one must look at all aspects of the game of basketball. The psychological factors as well as those of pure individual ability and team play must all be taken into account in the final analysis.

In the Loyola game McGill came up against an import squad bent on revenge for last year's defeat to the Redmen in the playoffs. Doug Daigneault's Warriors presented no real surprises as they rolled to a relatively easy victory 126-47. The Redmen simply succumbed to the "American Pie in your eye" psych-out. In other words, they went into the game doubting their own abilities and subsequently played as underdogs from the opening whistle. The Warriors worked hard to run up the score and, with the Redmen second-string in the game, Loyola continued to go with its top players.

Saturday's loss to Queen's was the result of vented frustrations. The frustrations manifested themselves in the form of an overload of fouls by the Redmen. The Queen's squad took full advantage of the situation and converted for 23 points from the bonus line, one more than the final difference between the two squads as the McGillers fell 69-47.

Last night's loss is more difficult to understand. The Loyola loss was one to an evidently better squad, the Queen's defeat came the night after, when the team seemed neither mentally nor physically ready for the opposition. The Ottawa Gee-Gee's were not in my opinion the superior team on the floor.

Maybe the team's failure to win should be viewed as the players' inability to relax on the court and realize their abilities both as a team and as individuals. The fan support certainly isn't helpful to the team and I strongly suggest that some of you folks out there in farland "Get your act together and turn out en masse" with some ole-time school spirit.

Reviewing the Ottawa game several interesting things come to light. Firstly, the Ottawa Gee-Gees should probably be renamed the "Butchers". The Ottawa squad hacked their way to an incredible 38 foul production. The Redmen certainly had no self-doubts in regard to free-throwing, as McGill scored 34 of its 58 points from the stripe.

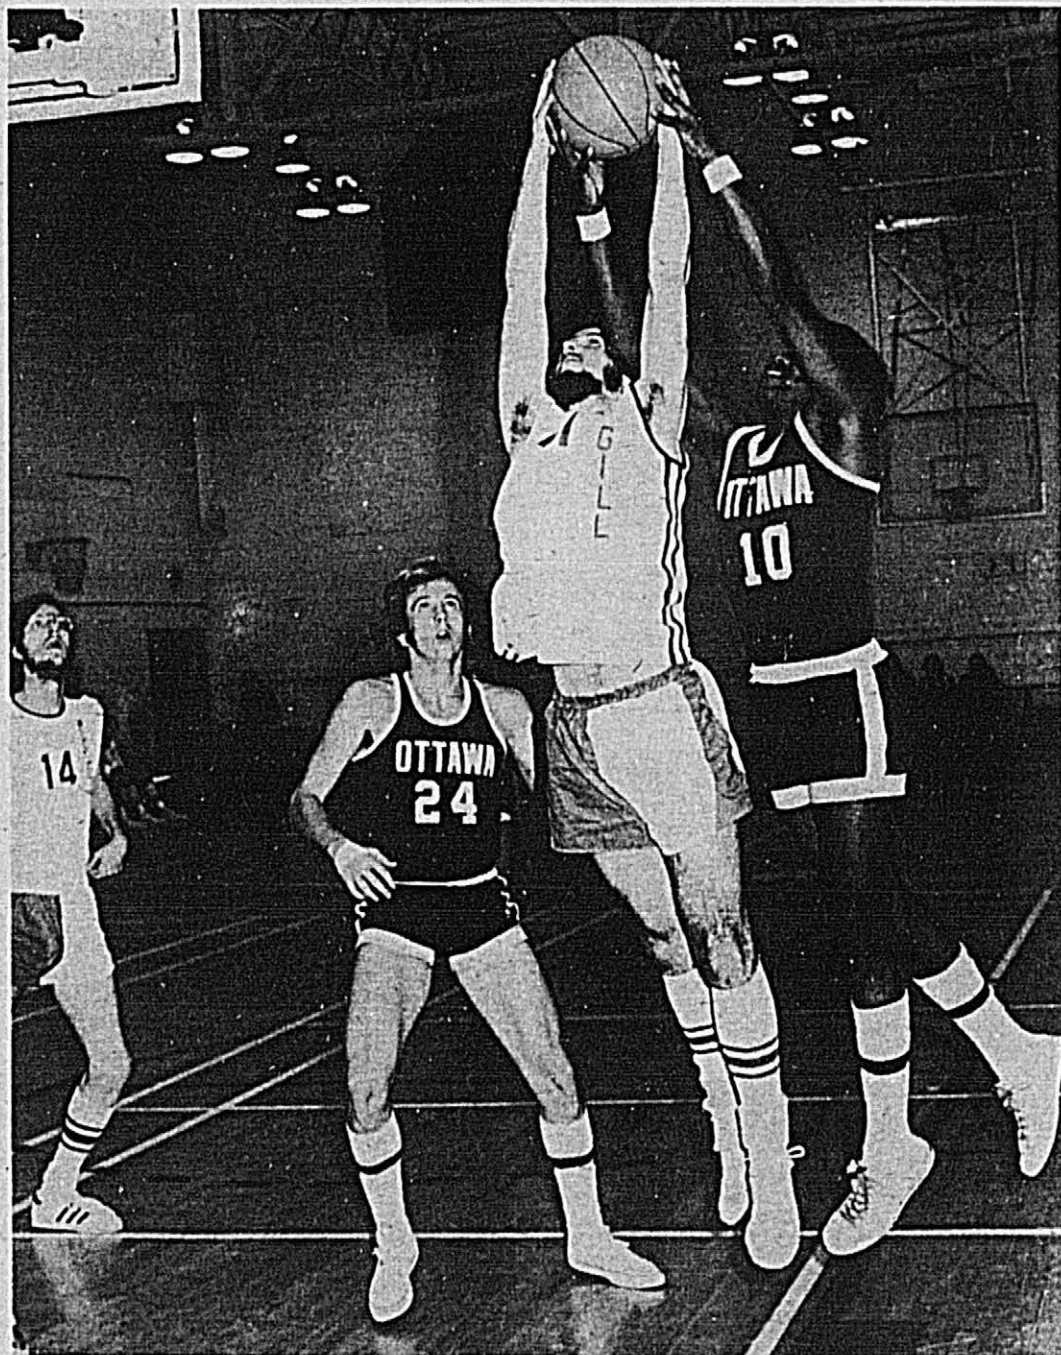

The Redmen, as is obvious, were not impressive in the Field Goal Dept. There seemed to be a general unwillingness on the part of the squad to put the ball up at the hoop as they attempted an anemic 32 shots from the floor.

Turnovers played a major role as McGill lost the ball over 40 times. The Redmen were outmuscled on the boards as Kit Kennard joined two Gee-Gee players on the sidelines as he fouled out midway in the second half. Without Kennard's sorely needed height, Ottawa became overwhelming in their quest for rebounds.

Only two Redmen players were able to find their way into the doublefigure column and both players turned in good performances. Joe Prah counted 16 as he hit on 10 of 11 from the line and Gary Stephens had a perfect night at the stripe as he tallied on 10 of 10.

Concluding the story I say that the Redmen can win. They led Ottawa by 3 points at halftime, 32-29 and trailed Queen's by a slim 2 at the half in that contest. Both these performances indicate that victory is no mere pipe dream. The losses to Queen's and Ottawa were both on the exhibition level of play as the McGillers stand 1-1 in league play. This team must strive to realize its potential collectively, and forget about the past. Things can only improve for McGill Basketball and I have no doubt that it will.

BASELINE DRIVES: Howard Drobetsky, playing in his first varsity game against Loyola, put out a strong all-around performance. In the short time of 2 minutes, he pulled a rebound, drew an offensive foul with sharp defensive play, and scored a beauty of a basket. His general play was commendable particularly in light of the game situation.

KEVIN WALSH, Redman leaper formidable, goes high to pull a rebound. McGiller Jim Logan, no. 11, watches as the scenario unfolds. Moments later, Gee-Gee hatchetmen moved in to deliver another of many fouls characterised by a blatant disregard for human life.
